#AskZellner @MakingAMurderer Yes, luminol can be used years later to detect blood evidence. We have done luminol testing in the Dassey garage and we are waiting for the results of the DNA swabs that we collected.

@ZellnerLaw can luminol be used years later & still detect blood evidence? And if yes, do you plan on using it in the trailer or garage to show that the prosecution's theory didn't happen? #askzellner

The DNA of Ms. Halbach was obviously removed from her key by the person who planted it in SA's bedroom. There is no credible explanation why there is no DNA mixture on the key @MakingAMurderer #AskZellner #askzellner do you believe that the reason the key had no other finger prints, besides Avery's, is because the person planting evidence forgot to wear gloves when moving the vehicle?

#AskZellner @MakingAMurderer We are not saying that Hillegas moved the car. We are saying that Hillegas may have assisted the police in locating the car because it is clear the police knew where the car was and told Pam Sturm where to find it on 11/5.

#AskZellner @MakingAMurderer Hopefully you will be discussing how Steven and Brendan were finally freed, and how they are living happy and healthy lives outside the state of Wisconsin.

#AskZellner do you think we'll be talking about this case in 10+ years?
@ZellnerLaw

Kathleen Zellner @ZellnerLaw · 23m

We'd appeal that decision to the Wisconsin Supreme Court. If we've developed new evidence, we'd re-file at the trial court level in Wisconsin. AEDPA is a big deterrent to filing in federal court as you can see given the outcome of the Dassey case @MakingAMurderer #AskZellner @ZellnerLaw #AskZellner so IF the appeal to the Appellate court fails, what happens next?

#AskZellner @MakingAMurderer Yes, Steven purchased these novelty items for his own personal use with his girlfriend; there's nothing illegal about the purchase. None of Teresa's DNA was found on either, and neither item could have restrained an adult woman who feared for her life
