

Local & State

OBITUARIES C-4 / VIEWS C-6

YOUR CONTACT
Amy Peltshak, deputy managing editor/local news editor
920-993-1500, ext. 286
e-mail: apeltshak@post-crescent.com

www.post-crescent.com

THE POST-CRESCENT

Thursday, March 1, 2007

AREA BRIEFS

Jim Lauson resigns from County Board

OSHKOSH — The Winnebago County Board underwent two changes Tuesday night involving supervisory seats in Neeshah and Menasha.

Longtime board member Jim Lauson had to resign his seat after 23 years on the board because of his recent move to Neenah's east side.

Stan Sevovich, a former Menasha alderman and eastern Winnebago County supervisor, was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Forrest "Woody" Nebel.

Sevovich, 45, who previously served 18 years as Menasha alderman, returns to the seat he held from 2002-04. He will face reelection in April 2008.

Registration open for INJUS day camp

APPLETON — The nonprofit group INJUS of Fox Valley is sponsoring Fun With Cultures, a day camp for children ages 6 to 14, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Appleton Public Library, 223 N. Oneida St.

Participants will learn about the people of Africa, Asia, Latin America and Europe through presentations and by preparing foods, creating arts, making crafts, trying dances and learning to music.

The cost is $10 per child. There are 30 spots available. Register with Shakki Shakki, shakki11@ix.netcom.com or 920-730-0404.

Sandhya Sathya, sathya@winduprads.com or 920-746-4911, or Kernal Varma, kvarma@newsroom.com or 920-733-0834.

Meeting tackles underage drinking

KALKAUNA — A student group that delivers drug prevention messages through improvisation and the performing arts will hold a town hall meeting to tackle underage drinking concerns.

The Kaukauna High School Pre-Act team will kick off the forum at 7 p.m. Monday at River View Middle School, 111 Oak St., with the viewing of "This Place," a documentary on teens and alcohol. It will be followed by findings on the effects of alcohol.

For more information, contact the group at 920-733-0834.

SETTING IT STRAIGHT

WISCONSIN REG. 28, PAGE C-8 is revised (phone number) was updated in The Post-Crescent for a story about a person doing using the latest government to allow the state's SeniorsCare prescription drug program to continue. The toll-free number is 888-534-0205.

LOTTERIES

Drawn Wednesday

Wisconsin: 8-6-7

Daily Pick 2: 8-6-4-2

Daily Pick 3: 20-24-27-39

Super Lotto: 15-30-34-42-48

Ballard: 4-5-6-8-25

Ballard: 19-24-41-42-53

From Page 7

Illinois: 3-7-8

Pick 3 (evening): 8-7-5-3

Michigan: 3-2-4

Daily 3: 8-4-5

Fortune 5: 3-10-27-30

Classic Lotto: 5-18-30-38-48

Pop editor: Andy Nelson

Veterans Affairs official ordered to Iraq

Secretary John Soccos to serve as colonel in Reserve

MADISON — The secretary of the state's Department of Veterans Affairs said Wednesday he has received orders for active duty service in Iraq.

John Soccos, 51, who has headed the department since 2003, will head to Iraq as a colonel in the Army Reserve in late April.

Soccos' spokesman, Anthony Hardie, said his deployment was to Baghdad and would last up to one year. Soccos was notified of the presidential call-up in recent days, he said.

"He's not at liberty to say what his actual duties will be," Hardie said.

"He's been talking a lot about how his own experiences in Iraq are going to have an impact on him and his leadership of the department's 130,000 U.S. military personnel already in Iraq.

His deployment comes as President Bush sends thousands of additional troops to Iraq as part of a plan to try to quell violence in Baghdad. The additional troops will join an estimated 130,000 U.S. military personnel already in Iraq.

Soccos said in the reserve he was proud to join thousands of other Americans who have served in Iraq, Afghanistan and other challenging environments.

"Like them, I am proud to continue my service to our nation and the people of this great state," he said.

Soccos has been in the Army for 27 years of active and reserve service, serving in Bosnia in the 1990s. He has a wife and three young children.

An secretary, Soccos oversees an agency that administers benefits to some 470,000 veterans in Wisconsin. The agency also operates veterans homes and cemeteries as well as a museum.

In his absence, Deputy Secretary Bill Kloster will serve as the department's acting secretary.

In the statement, Doyle said Soccos "is just another example of the tremendous contributions that members of our military from Wisconsin are making."

Mother depicts family ties

Karen Halbach answers range of questions about daughter

By Andy Nelson

Special to Post-Crescent

CHILTON — Karen Halbach answered the calmest of questions in the courtroom when she called to stand to testify Wednesday in the murder trial of Steven Avery.

Halbach, who raised five kids on a rural Calumet County farm, did not cry as a special prosecutor Ken Kratz testified to her. Nor did she bat an eye when he warned that some of his questions might be challenging.

Her family, on the other hand, showed enough emotion for her to be asked to step out.

Kratz called Halbach to the stand late Wednesday morning and asked her about her relationship with Teresa's Palm Pilot, and professed as the family's relationship with their daughter.

Halbach's testimony came in the 13th day of testimony. Avery, 44, of Mishock, is accused of murdering Teresa Halbach's body to conceal her murder.

An Karen Halbach settled into the witness chair, piercing feedback squeaked through the courtroom's sound system, and when the problem was fixed, the courtroom was silent but for the crackle of a candy wrapper sewed destiny.

Kratz covered most of the same ground with Karen Halbach that he did with her son Mike and with her daughter Katie earlier in the trial.

Karen Halbach said her family was close and would often spend time together on weekends.

"We spent a lot of time together, we'd go out," Karen Halbach testified.

"It seemed like the kids were always over on Sunday after school and we'd talk, sit around the island in our kitchen and talk a lot."

"We just spent a lot of time together," Mike Halbach, who serves as family spokesman, took a deep breath as his room took the stand. He sat up right and rigid with both feet planted firmly on the floor in front of him. His hands were folded in his lap, fingers interlaced. His eyes stayed fixed on his mother, but his chin remained tucked to his chest and a faint smile that looked forced crossed his lips.

On the other end of the front row, Tom Halbach, Karen's husband, worked hard to maintain his composure. Watching his wife talk about times spent with Teresa visibly tore at him.

So Teresa was actually killed on your dad's birthday?" Kratz asked.

"Yes," Karen Halbach said.

Teresa Halbach's photo studio partner,

Neither man used one.

Neither did Karen Halbach.

Karen Halbach testified that on Oct. 30, 2005, the day before investigators think Halbach was killed, the family celebrated Karen Halbach's father's birthday. His actual birth date is Oct. 31.

So Teresa was actually killed on your dad's birthday?" Kratz asked.

"Yes," Karen Halbach said.

Teresa Halbach's photo studio partner,

Neither man used one.

Neither did Karen Halbach.

Karen Halbach testified that on Oct. 30, 2005, the day before investigators think Halbach was killed, the family celebrated Karen Halbach's father's birthday. His actual birth date is Oct. 31.

So Teresa was actually killed on your dad's birthday?" Kratz asked.

"Yes," Karen Halbach said.

Teresa Halbach's photo studio partner,

Neither man used one.

Neither did Karen Halbach.

Karen Halbach testified that on Oct. 30, 2005, the day before investigators think Halbach was killed, the family celebrated Karen Halbach's father's birthday. His actual birth date is Oct. 31.

So Teresa was actually killed on your dad's birthday?" Kratz asked.

"Yes," Karen Halbach said.

Teresa Halbach's photo studio partner,

The Steven Avery trial

By Dan Wilson

Special to Post-Crescent

On the Web

Coverage of the Avery trial at www.post-crescent.com/avery

Inside

Experts link evidence to murder / C-3

Prosecutors' case needs end / C-3

Developer-financed TIF key to $1.5M Gilbert site project

By Michael King

Special to Post-Crescent

MENASHA — The city's first developer-financed district is proposed to help facilitate construction of a $1.5 million office building overlooking a pond on the former Gilbert Paper mill site.

The city's Redevelopment Authority on Wednesday night endorsed a development agreement with the property owner and developer to provide up to $350,000 in development incentives for the office project along Adams Street.

It replaces a previous plan to convert an old boiler house on the property into offices.

The new approach, which goes to the Common Council on Monday, means the developer, not the city, will take out the loan.

The city will make annual payments to the developer only after the building is completed and on the city tax rolls.

Due to the city's financial troubles with the Menasha Utilities steam plant, it needed to explore other options at the 12-acre site left vacant since Gilbert Paper closed in late 2001.

"It's a very creative way of using TIF," said Mayor Joe Lutz.

"The risk basically is not on the city, it's on the developer."

JOE LUTZ, mayor of Menasha

of using TIF," said Mayor Joe Lutz.

"The risk basically is not on the city, it's on the developer."

JOE LUTZ, mayor of Menasha

One floor of the new office building will be leased by East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, which had been a proposed tenant in the boiler house project that proved to be too costly.

A revised master plan now shows the new offices on the west side of the duck pond, across from the former paper mill office now used as an office by eight attorneys and an accountant.

Quick read

Last week's $1.5 million grant application to help lease the former Gilbert Paper mill was put on hold by the city.

The latest is a plan to renovate the mill's boiler house into a new $1.5 million office building.

What it means: The city's developer-financed TIF project aims to advance the project and help secure an $875,000 grant to clean up the site.

The plan also shows the public greenspace along the Fox River shoreline to include a proposed whitewater park.

Officials are excited about the rooftop possibilities at the site, especially since a feasibility study in December identified it as having the greatest potential for creation of a Fox Cities whitewater park.

"We're incredibly excited," said attorney Tom Chalkoff, co-owner of the site proposed for a mixture of commercial or residential development. "It will definitely be very unique to the state of Wisconsin."

More on this can be reached at 920-738-8222, ext. 31, or mking@post-crescent.com.

Local & State

OBITUARIES C-4 / VIEWS C-6

YOUR CONTACT
Amy Pelishak, deputy managing editor/local 920-969-1000, ext. 286
e-mail: apelishak@postcrescent.com

THE POST-CRESCENT
Thursday, March 1, 2007

AREA BRIEFS

Larsen mangled in snowmobile crash

A 24-year-old Larsen man died early today after a snowmobile crash in the Town of Hartshorn, the Shawano County Sheriff's Department said.

The victim has been identified as John R. Wolgram.

At 1:28 a.m., the sheriff's office received a report that a snowmobile had crashed into a tree on a trail in the village of Mattoon. The victim was taken to Antigo's Langlade Memorial Hospital where he died, the sheriff's department said.

Jim Larson resigns from County Board

OSHKOSH — The Winnebago County Board underwent two changes Tuesday night involving supervisory seats in Neenah and Menasha.

Longtime board member Jim Larson had to resign his seat after 25 years on the board because of his recent move to Neenah's east side.

Stan Sorench, a former Menasha alderman and one-term Winnebago County supervisor, was appointed to fill the unexpected term of the late Forrest "Woody" Weber.

Seventy, 45, who previously served 18 years as Menasha alderman, returns to the seat he held from 2002-04. He will face reelection in April 2008.

Registration open for Indus day camp

APPLETON — The nonprofit group INDUS of Fox Valley is sponsoring Fun With Culture, a day camp for children ages 6 to 14, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday at the Appleton Public Library, 225 N. Oconto St.

Participants will learn about the people of Africa, Asia, Latin America and Europe through presentations and by preparing foods, creating arts, making crafts, trying dances and listening to music.

The cost is $10 per child. There are 30 spots available. Register with Shakti Shakti, shakti11@k14.org or 920-710-0114; Sandhya Sridhar, sandhyasridhar@aol.com or 920-710-0114; or Kamal Varma, kvara@indus.org or 920-710-0114.

SETTING IT STRAIGHT

WISCONSIN FEB. 28, PAGE C-8 An incorrect phone number was supplied to the Post-Crescent for a story about a person due using the federal government to allow the state's Seneca reservation program to continue. The last-line number is 888-534-0000.

LOTTERIES

Drawn Wednesday

Wisconsin:

Daily Pick 2: 8-0-7
Daily Pick 4: 8-4-2
Super Lotto: 20-24-27-37-39
MegaMillions: 18-30-36-41-48
Bumper 5: 4-5-6-8-25
Powerball: 13-24-40-50-55
Power Play: 3

Illinois:

Pick 3 (evening): 3-7-8
Pick 4 (evening): 8-7-5-3

Michigan:

Daily 2: 3-2-4
Daily 4: 0-8-4-5
Fantasy 5: 3-10-22-27-30
Classic Lotto: 5-18-30-35-46

Page editor: Nancy Steiner

Veterans Affairs official ordered to Iraq

Secretary John Scocos to serve as colonel in Reserve

MADISON — The secretary of the state's Department of Veterans Affairs said Wednesday he has received orders for active duty service in Iraq.

John Scocos, 51, who has headed the department since 2003, will be based in Iraq as a colonel in the Army Reserve in late April.

Scocos' spokesman, Anthony Hardie, said his deployment was in Baghdad and would last up to one year. Scocos was notified of the presidential call-up in recent days, he said.

"He's not at liberty to say what his actual duties will be," Hardie said.

"He's been talking a lot about how his own experience in Iraq are going to have an impact on him and his leadership of the department upon his return," Hardie said.

His deployment comes as President Bush sends tens of thousands of additional troops to Iraq as part of a plan to try to quell violence in Baghdad. The additional troops will join an estimated 130,000 U.S. military personnel already in Iraq.

Scocos said in the release he was proud to join thousands of other Americans who have served in Iraq, Afghanistan and other challenging environments.

"Like them, I am proud to continue my service to our nation and the people of this great state," he said.

Scocos has been in the Army for 27 years of active and reserve service, serving in Bosnia in the 1990s. He has a wife and three young children.

An secretary, Scocos oversees an agency that administers benefits to some 470,000 veterans in Wisconsin. The agency also operates veterans homes and cemeteries as well as a maunabo. Deputy Secretary Bill Klotzer will serve as the department's acting secretary.

In the statement, Doyle said Scocos "is just another example of the tremendous contributions that members of our military from Wisconsin are making."

Expert describes remains

Anthropologist testifies she smelled fuel or accelerant

By Andy Neilson
Cover Illustration: Steve Johnson

CHILTON — Steven Avery's jury trial got off to a late start today — with testimony under way about 9:20 a.m. — after lawyers met to hammer out witness issues.

Forensic anthropologist Leslie Eisenberg took the stand today so one of Avery's attorneys, Dean Strang, could continue his cross-examination.

Eisenberg began her testimony Wednesday and detailed her examination of burned remains — human and otherwise — found on the Avery's Auto Salvage property on Nov. 8, 2005.

Avery, 44, is accused of killing photographer Teresa Halbach on Halbach's 2005. She also admitted to burning her body to conceal the crime. Avery's nephew, Brendan Dassey, 17, also is accused in Halbach's death. Today marks the one-year anniversary of the crime.

Eisenberg today led off her testimony by explaining that when she opened one of the containers of charred remains, she smelled the odor of fuel or an accelerant, but wasn't sure what it was.

"There was no way — from the contents of that container to tell where the odor was coming from," Eisenberg said.

Under cross-examination, Eisenberg said that there was no smell of burned rubber or rubber residue with any of the remains.

Eisenberg said she was asked to evaluate remains found in a quarry southeast of the Avery property. She said the pieces looked like a pelvic bone, but she wasn't sure if the remains were human.

Eisenberg said they were "suspected, possible human pelvic bones," but said her determination could not be clear. She said there was evidence that the bones had been cut.

"It was a long linear cut of the two bones that were still in the same proximity," Eisenberg said. "It was a long slicing cut on each side." Strang asked if the fragments were too small to make a conclusive determination.

"Less than six inches, but the contours of the bones looked like after they were cut," Eisenberg said, noting that the fragments were pelvic remains from someone's or something's right side.

Eisenberg's testimony Wednesday was preceded by the short but powerful testimony of Teresa's mother, Karen Halbach, who appeared in the room where she was called to stand.

Halbach, who raised five kids on a rural farm, didn't finish at special prosecutor Ken Kratz's request to testify. Nor did she but she was warned that some of his questions might be difficult.

Her family, on the other hand, showed enough emotion for her.

Kratz called Halbach to the stand late Wednesday morning and asked her about topics as mundane as Teresa's Palm Pilot, and professed as the family's relationship with their

Man gets prison sentence for abuse

Judge describes girlfriend's beating as 'horrific' case

By Dan Wilson
Photo Courtesy: Jeff Miller

APPLETON — A 32-year-old Appleton man was sentenced Wednesday to four years in prison for a beating of his 18-year-old girlfriend described by the judge as "horrific."

Lugene Rushing, formerly of 312 W. Frances St., was convicted of aggravated battery and substantial battery for two separate assaults on Jan. 13 and Feb. 13, 2005.

He also pleaded guilty to child abuse in the hospitalization of the victim.

"This is a horrific beating of another human being that I don't desire to see," said Outagamie County Circuit Judge John DeJardin. "She did not deserve that at all."

The beating resulted in broken ribs, a broken jaw and broken vertebrae that required hospitalization.

At the preliminary hearing in the case the victim testified through a lawyer that she was raped. On Feb. 13, 2005, the victim, who worked as a stripper, came home and Rushing, according to the complaint, was upset with her for not bringing home enough money.

The argument then escalated when she threatened to leave with their two children. The beating covered the span of several hours and Rushing then forced her to perform oral sex on him through her braided hair.

Rushing will receive credit for the two years he has spent in jail and, after his release, will serve two more years on extended supervision.

The writer can be reached at 920-729-6227, ext. 47, or danwilson@postcrescent.com.

KAREN HALBACH, mother of Teresa Halbach, speaks by a photo of Teresa projected on a screen in the courtroom after giving her testimony during the Steven Avery murder trial at the Calumet County Courthouse on Wednesday in Chilton.

The Steven Avery trial

On the Web
Coverage of the Avery trial at any of our websites: www.postcrescent.com/avery

Inside

- Experts link evidence in Halbach / C-3
- Prosecutor's case remains end / C-3

See AMERIC C-3

Developer-financed TIF key to $1.5M project set for Gilbert site

By Michael King
Cover Illustration: Steve Johnson

MENASHA — The city's first developer-financed tax incrementation district is proposed to help facilitate construction of a $1.5 million office building overlooking a pond on the former Gilbert Paper mill site.

The city's Redevelopment Authority on Wednesday night endorsed a development agreement with the property owner and developer to provide up to $300,000 in development incentives for the office project. It replaces a previous plan to convert an old boiler house on the property into offices.

The new approach, which goes to the Common Council on Monday, means the developer, not the city, will take out the loan.

The city will make annual payments to the developer only after the building is completed and on the city's tax rolls.

City officials and the developer, Randy Stadtmaier, hope the proposed 14,000-square-foot, two-story office building will be enough of a commitment to convince the state Department of Commercial Development of using TIF. Mayor Joe Lang said.

"The risk basically is not on the city, it's on the developer."

JOE LANG, mayor of Menasha more to award the city an $875,000 brownfield grant for environmental remediation and demolition of the mill.

Due to the city's financial troubles with the Menasha Utilities steam plant, it needed to explore other options at the 12-acre site left vacant since Gilbert Paper closed in late 2001.

"It's a very creative way of using TIF," Mayor Joe Lang said.

"The risk basically is not on the city, it's on the developer."

One floor of the new office building will be leased by East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission, which had been a proposed tenant in the boiler house project that proved to be too costly.

A revised master plan now shows the new office on the west side of the dock pond, across from the former paper mill office now used as an office by eight attorneys and an accountant.

whitewater park.

Officials are excited about the reworked possibility at the site, especially since a feasibility study in December identified an existing boiler house as having the greatest potential for creation of a Fox Cities whitewater park.

"We're incredibly excited," said attorney Tom Chalchoff, co-chairman of the site proposed for a mixture of commercial or residential development. "It will definitely be very unique to the state of Wisconsin."

The plan also shows the public greenspace along the Fox River shoreline to include a proposed

whitewater park.

Officials are excited about the reworked possibility at the site, especially since a feasibility study in December identified an existing boiler house as having the greatest potential for creation of a Fox Cities whitewater park.

"We're incredibly excited," said attorney Tom Chalchoff, co-chairman of the site proposed for a mixture of commercial or residential development. "It will definitely be very unique to the state of Wisconsin."

The plan also shows the public greenspace along the Fox River shoreline to include a proposed

Thursday, March 1, 2007 ■ www.post-crescent.com

JEROME BUTING, Steven Avery's attorney (left); Calumet County Dist. Atty. Ken Kratz; Dean Strang, also Avery's attorney; and prosecutor Thomas Fallon discuss testimony with Manitowish County Circuit Judge Patrick Willis in the courtroom at the Calumet County Courthouse in Oshkosh.

STEVEN AVERY TRIAL

Forensic experts link teeth, bones to Halbach

AVERY: Karen Halbach's testimony calm

Watching his wife talk about times spent with Teresa Halbach in the witness chair, piercing Redback appeared through the courtroom's sound system and when the problem was fixed, the courtroom was silent that even the creak of a candy wrapper seemed deafening.

Kratz covered much of the same ground with Karen Halbach that he did with her son Mike and with her daughter Katie earlier in the trial.

Karen Halbach said her family was close and would often spend time together on weekends.

Mike Halbach, who serves as family spokesman, took a deep breath as his room took the stand. He sat upright and rigid with both feet planted flatly on the floor in front of him. His hands were folded in his lap, fingers interlaced. His eyes were fixed on his mother, but his chin remained tucked to his chest and a faint smile that looked forced crossed his lips.

On the other end of the front row, Tom Halbach, Karen's husband, worked hard to maintain his composure.

Forensic anthropologist Lester Eisenberg added another layer to the mix late Wednesday. She testified that she thinks the burned body was a homicide victim.

Avery, 44, of Mishawaka, is accused of killing photographer Teresa Halbach on Halloween 2005. Prosecutors allege Avery and his 17-year-old nephew, Brendan Dancy, killed Halbach and buried her body to cover the crime. A DNA report from the State Crime Lab last week that the found Halbach's DNA when she analyzed the remains found on Avery's property.

It was pieces among the 38 skull fragments that assembled Eisenberg's picture in Eisenberg's mind.

"In my professional opinion, the manner of death in this case was by homicidal violence," Eisenberg said.

"In investigating and examining every fragment and every piece that was recovered from the scene — there were two fragments, in particular two skull fragments — showed in my mind unmistakable defects or unusual openings, openings that were not caused either by some disease process — they're pathological — nor were they caused by some congenital condition or a condition someone might have been born with."

Holes in the skull fragments were indicative of gunshot wounds, Eisenberg testified. But under cross-examination by one of Avery's attorneys he admitted that he could not determine if the gunshot wounds came before or after death, raising questions about the homicide claim.

Eisenberg noted that he helped with body identification at Ground Zero in New York and in New Orleans after Hurricane Katrina, and he stopped short of making a positive identification because he had only a fragment to work with. He noted that the pieces he did analyze were very close to a positive identification match.

Tom Staridviant, an agent with the State Department of Justice's Division of Criminal Investigation, was on hand during the bone and skull fragments were uncovered.

Eisenberg testified Wednesday he was among the investigators who sifted for bone fragments in the debris of the burn pit. Staridviant said he found one bone fragment about eight feet from the scorched burn area. He said the majority of the other remains were found in the burned area.

"We picked out things we thought to be bone fragments, including teeth, and placed them in a box which was turned over to the Crime Lab," Staridviant testified.

Body bones were to the Great Bay Press-Scandinavian.

Prosecutors near end of their case

CHILTON — Prosecutors have "probably less than a week" before they finally present their homicide case against Steven Avery.

Calumet County Dist. Atty. Ken Kratz, the lead special prosecutor in the case, made the comments Wednesday after the 13th day of testimony in the case against Teresa Halbach's alleged killer.

The trial had been scheduled to run six weeks, and attorneys spent a week on jury selection in Manitowish before the trial was moved here.

Kratz said the length of his case "may depend" on what defense attorneys do, but he said defense attorney and Manitowish County Judge Patrick Willis has been informed of his schedule.

He said he still has several expert witnesses, law enforcement officers and other witnesses to call.

Kratz used the after-court conference to say he has noticed a "shift" in defense strategy away from accusations that Manitowish County officers planted Avery's blood in Halbach's vehicle, using a nail that was unaccounted for 11 years in the Manitowish County Clerk of Courts office.

"You haven't heard very much about that in the last week or so," Kratz said.

Voice mail mystery

Floating in limbo all day Wednesday was the alleged Nov. 2, 2005, recovery of Teresa Halbach's cell phone voice mail.

Steven Avery's lawyers alluded to it during cross-examination of two cell phone company employees who testified about the phone records of both Avery and Teresa Halbach.

Defense lawyer Jerome Buting offered that someone retrieved Halbach's voice mail on Nov. 2, the day before her friends and family determined she was missing.

Buting challenged prosecutors to show who collected the voice mail and then said the lead was not fully investigated and showed investigative bias.

Special prosecutor Ken Kratz fired back after testimony Wednesday and said the issue will be resolved soon. He bristled at the allegation of wrongdoing or bias.

"Since I'm talking about yesterday's facts, I will comment that Mr. Buting's representation — whether his representation was that Ms. Hal-

Behavioral Health Education Series

TheDeaCare Behavioral Health is sponsoring a FREE monthly educational program for the community. If you want to learn more about these topics for yourself or someone you care about, please plan to attend.

March 8 What is Anxiety?
Mary Leshard, MS, LPC, NCC

April 12 Child and Adolescent ADHD
Chris Stanzani, MSW, LPC

May 10 When Does Substance Use Become a Concern?
Wendy Auer, CLC, III

Maplewood Room, Lower level
(May 10 - Oakwood Room)
Appleton Medical Center
6:30-7:30 p.m.

THE DEACARE BEHAVIORAL HEALTH
www.thedecare.org

NEW SATURDAY HOURS 8:00 - NOON
WEEKDAY HOURS
Monday - Thursday 7:30 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.
Friday 7:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.

REGISTRATION IS REQUIRED AND SEATING IS LIMITED.
To register online, go to www.thedecare.org or phone TheDeaCare at 920-437-4377 or (800) 296-2236.

Buy One Get One Free
on the Motorola Razr

Some things are just better in UltraCom

1835 E. Edgewood Dr. Suite 112, Appleton
(Across from Appleton North High School)
(920) 855-3570

New 2007 Arrivals

SEIKO WATCHES AND CLOCKS

MILLER CLOCK SERVICE & SALES
1827 W. Wisconsin Ave. • Oshkosh • 920-231-5756
Monday - Friday 9:00 - 5:00 • Saturday 9:00 - 4:00

RICH'S BAKERS OUTLET

Largest CAKES selection in the Fox River Valley

Scheduled Sale - March 2nd
10AM - 5PM

Macaroni & Cheese
Jalapeno Marble
Coke
Poppers
Cake
Ravoli

505 Grand Ave., Little Chute 687-8755

MF's Silk Sale

30% off

Wreaths • Loose Silk Door Swags
Silk Arrangements

Every Friday purchase a beautiful fresh flower bunch only $5 ($10.99 value)

MEMORIAL FLORISTS & GREENHOUSES, INC. 30%
314 S. Commercial St. • Neenah
232 S. Memorial Dr. • Appleton
428 E. Northland Ave. • Appleton 731.3136
www.memorialflorists.com